Germany Defines Her Intentions in Regard to the Island of Heligoland.

A Pedestrian Shot Down by a Sentry at One of the London Barracks.

Sentence Affirmed.

PARIS, Aug. 5.—The appeal court has affirmed the sentence of six months' imprisonment imposed on M. Scerton, for his connection with the questionable operations of the recent copper syndicate, but has reduced the fine of 10,000 francs imposed on him to 3,000 francs. The court rescinded the sentence of three months' imprisonment imposed upon M. Lacrissiere, but sustained the decision of the lower court, fining him 600 francs.

A Shocking Accident.

BERLIN, Aug. 5.—A shocking accident occurred to-day at Ernewaldo. Eighteen Berlin pleasure seekers, who were arriving in a large wagonette, were thrown down an embankment into the river Flavel, and five of them were instantly killed. The horse shied at a red parasol carried by a lady who was walking on the road. Before anything could be done to prevent the disaster, the horses backed the carriage over the embankment and fell with it upon top of the unfortunate occupants. In addition to the people killed there were several others seriously injured. Miss Fielder, a young lady of excellent family, was taken from the debris in a dying condition. She was to have been married to-morrow to Herr Wilberforce, who is among the killed.

A Sentry-Murderer.

LONDON, Aug. 5.—Last evening a pedestrian passing the West End Barracks was shot dead by one of the guards. It does not appear that the unfortunate man was even challenged by the sentry. The latter claims that his victim was straying within prohibited limits. The guard was arrested and examined as to his sanity in view of the wantonness of his action. Examination abundantly proved that the culprit was sane, and he was to-day committed for trial on a charge of wilful murder.

Heligoland's Transfer.

LONDON, Aug. 5.—Count Von Hatzfeldt, German Ambassador, had a long interview with Lord Salisbury this afternoon on the subject of the formal transfer of Heligoland to Germany. Count Von Hatzfeldt, fresh from an audience with his imperial master, fully defined the intentions of Germany in regard to the use to which that empire will devote the newly acquired territory, and specifically indicated the extent to which it will be fortified. The conference concluded with a complete arrangement for the relinquishment of the island by England, and its official acceptance by Germany, including a detailed programme of the ceremonies which will be observed on that occasion. After the interview Count Hatzfeldt returned to Osborne to report to the Emperor. On Thursday Lord Salisbury will go to Osborne, where he will have an interview with the German Emperor and an audience with the Queen.

In the Commons.

LONDON, Aug. 5.—In the House of Commons to-night, P. O'Brien, member for North Monaghan, was asked whether the government intended to prosecute the Poet Swinburne for writing a poem which was published in the Fortnightly Review, inciting the murder of the Czar. Mr. O'Brien was proceeding to read the poem when the Speaker called him to order, saying that parliament could not control the poems of Swinburne. The Speaker's remark caused great laughter.

President Celman Resigns.

LONDON, Aug. 5.—A dispatch to the Times from Buenos Ayres says, President Celman having been abandoned by Appelligrini, Rocca, Pena and Garcia, thus becoming completely isolated, has been forced to present his resignation to a joint meeting of the chambers. The presentation of his resignation is probably a trick. The chambers have a constitutional right to decide whether the President's reasons for resigning are sufficient to warrant the acceptance of his resignation. Celman declares that his resignation is irrevocable.

THE CATHEDRAL DISPUTE.

In the matter, re. the Roman Catholic cathedral, the dispute which arose was in consequence of Sub-Contractor Smith having used stone in the footing of the towers and piers which was not according to the specifications, being unhewn stone just fresh from the quarry and not dimensioned stone as required by the specification. When he had been laying this kind of stone for about four or five days he was stopped by the order of the architect, who claimed that, besides the work being out of accord with the specifications, the effect of it would be to impair, if not entirely destroy, the strength of the foundations and to render the whole structure dangerous. This suit was brought by the sub-contractor against the architect and the principal contractor, McDonald, for the purpose of compelling the architect to give him (Smith) a certificate as to the propriety of the work. The contractor McDonald, upon orders of the superintendent of the work had proceeded to remove this work, whereupon Smith applied to the court for an injunction to restrain McDonald.

The Chief Justice granted a temporary injunction until one o'clock, the day after it was applied for, but on the facts being disclosed at the time appointed for hearing the motion to continue the injunction, and the Chief Justice having personally inspected the work, he refused to interfere with its removal, being of opinion that the contention that the work so done would impair the efficiency of the structure, was well taken; but in view of the fact that Smith, the sub-contractor had been allowed during the space of four or five days this improper material the judge was of the impression that the contractor was liable to make good the work which had been thrown away. He said—

I am of opinion that the foundations of the towers are not proper or sufficient. They decidedly fall short of the specifications as to the twelve superficial feet particular, but the specifications as to the other dimensions are so vague, if not impossible, that it would be very difficult to condemn the work in other respects as departing from the specifications—e. g., stones are to be "about" twelve feet thick and grouted. This leaves the amount of grouting quite indefinite. If wholly laid with square stones, as would surely be best and which seems to be contemplated by the drawings, little or no grouting would be required. But the specification is almost wholly silent as to the shape or surface of the stones. They are to have a "quoin," but that scarcely stipulates distinctly that every stone is to be quoined or squared at every angle. So the specification about twelve inches thick.

Does this allow of a deviation, more or less, of an inch, or of two or three inches? It is supposed by the plaintiff to be complied with if the stone be twelve thick anywhere, and stones actually are used with a complete "A" section if only they have one side flat and the apex of the A be twelve inches or more from the floor, sometimes a good deal more is laid on sand, the lower side of the stone ought to be as nearly flat as may be. The extremely irregular upper surface of a dozen stones, each with an A section (laid in one row) would cause the upper portion of that course not to be a solid stone at all, but a mere mass of small masonry, grouted if you will, but still not what is contemplated in the plans. Per contra, I am not at all clear that what Mr. Donovan now seems to desire is usually defined in this particular. I rather think it is not. But I think his requirements extremely proper for the safety of the edifice. In fact, it seems to me that unless the particulars as to the foundation be more fully and distinctly explained and perhaps altered in some respects they are incapable of being worked on in some particulars or of being satisfactorily carried out in others. At present I really think they would mislead a contractor into executing unfit and insecure work, such as the plaintiff's is, at least as regards the foundations of the towers, and for this the defendants are responsible. The presence of Father Durand at the works would also probably mislead the plaintiff. I have no doubt but that the Father has quite accurately described his position. He was to attend and inspect continually and report to the Bishop. But he really seems to have done a good deal more, and I have no reason to doubt that the plaintiff is quite honest in believing him to have been deputed to give directions and to approve of the work in progress. But whichever way that may be—if he were so deputed, then the plaintiff's work was directly acquiesced in and approved: if not, then he was left to lay these stones, several day's work, without any effective interference at all. Donovan says he came and grumbled but he ought to have authoritatively prevented this improper placing of the foundation stones. If necessary he could have get an order from the Court. It is probably therefore that the plaintiff may be entitled to some compensation for the labor, &c., thus thrown away. But as to a continuance of the injunction against removing this work: in my opinion unsafe and insufficient, that is quite another thing. An injunction is always a matter of discretion, and unless I permit the defendants to remove this work, either the whole building stops or else they will have to continue their building upon what I am of opinion is an unsafe foundation. Either of these alternatives is most pernicious. On the other hand the plaintiff can get all the compensation he can ask, by damages. I must therefore dissolve the injunction, or rather refuse to continue the interim order. It would perhaps be well if this particular sub-contract as the foundations of the towers and columns were agreed to be put an end to, on terms, and the builders were to call for new sub-contracts, explaining more clearly the required dimensions, and shape and methods of laying the stones, perhaps altering, at any rate supplementing, and explaining them especially as to the upper as well as to the lower surface of the stones to be used; as to the central positions of the columns upon those foundations, and as to the extent and position of the quoins which the stones are to have, the superficial area of the base and upper surface of each stone might be defined. Twelve feet seems very large. At Montreal probably, where they have admirable stone quarries, this is not an excessive size, but slabs of granite in use here are scarcely obtainable in these dimensions.

HON. DAVID MILLS' VIEW

On the Behring Sea Question—America Must Not Abandon Her Traditional Policy.

The Harrison Government Has No Case in the Matter if this is Forgotten.

TORONTO, Aug. 5.—Hon. David Mills in a speech on the Behring Sea question at Dresden on Emancipation Day, said:—"Unless President Harrison is prepared to abandon the traditional policy of the United States in reference to the freedom of this sea, his government has no case of sovereignty over Behring Sea, or what was formerly known as the North Pacific Ocean. The preservation of seals is of far less consequence than the preservation of our rights as free people upon high seas. We ought not to yield to a foreign power in what should justify revolution against the parent state; and we ought not to yield, under pretence of preserving the seals, that which the United States refused in order to save men and women from chains and slavery.

AMERICAN NEWS.

A Mysterious Wreck.

LONG BRANCH, N. J., Aug. 5.—The mystery in connection with the unknown barge which was wrecked at this place a few days ago deepens. This morning an artist on Harper's Weekly, who was sketching the wreck, discovered a foot showing out of the water. The coroner was notified. Investigation was at once made and four bodies were found. The name or the number of the barge cannot be ascertained. The theory is that she is a barge that was sunk by the steamship Thingvalla. If this is the case, the barge had four men aboard and was Barge B. 13, from Newport, Va. The names of those on the barge were Captain Dicks, Summers, Bob Waters, a man named Fleming, and another whose name is not known. One of the agents of the consignees who is here failed to recognize the bodies.

San Salvador Citizens Exiled.

LA LIBERATAD, Aug. 5.—Three of San Salvador's richest citizens have been exiled for being concerned in a plot to overthrow the Ezeta government. The three are Joaquim Perez, Guirola and Maurice Duque. The latter is alleged to be a United States citizen of California, known as Mauriee Duke. Orders for the expulsion of the three men were issued separately and addressed to the chief of police of the capital of Salvador. Perez, Gulrola and Duke were only allowed one hour to prepare their baggage before leaving the capital, and were to-day placed on board the Pacific Mail coast steamer bound toward San Francisco. These men are three of the richest inhabitants of Salvador, and have always been supplying funds to the Zaldevarists for the purchase of arms and ammunition, as well as for the payment of troops who were to fight under the standard of Galdivard and Moran.

JOLIET, Ills., Aug. 5.—Herbert Wyman murdered George Krouse to-day, mistaking him for Joseph Dockendorf, whom he had forbidden to visit his daughter. Wyman met Dockendorf with his daughter at a picnic last Sunday, when the latter handled Wyman pretty roughly. To-day Wyman came upon the man whom he supposed was Dockendorf, with his back turned, and deliberately plunged a knife to the hilt under Krouse's left shoulder. Wyman was taken into custody.

Death of Rev. Adam Ballou.

MILFORD, Mass., Aug. 5.—Rev. Adam Ballou, pastor of Hopedale Universalist Church, died to-day aged 87. He was a lineal descendant of Marechal Gunebond Ballou, one of William the Conqueror's generals, who died in 1091; the family settled in Rhode Island in 1646. The deceased was born in Cumberland, R. I. He entered the Baptist ministry in 1821 and became a Universalist in 1823, officiating over Boston, New York, Medway, Milford, Belingham, Mendon, and Hopedale churches. In 1842 he, with others, founded the Hopedale community, which was designed to live according to the literal interpretation of the teachings of Christ. Upon its dissolution in 1856, Ballou was chosen pastor of the Universalist society formed therefor. He was a leading anti-slavery worker. During his life time he married 2,398 persons; conducted 2,603 funerals; delivered nearly 80,000 addresses and sermons, and wrote five hundred books and pamphlets. The deceased leaves a widow and one married daughter.

NIAGARA FALLS, Aug. 5.—At 6 o'clock this morning, Officer McMillan, of the reservation police force, found a brown coat, a black vest and a slouch hat on the bank of the river in Prospect park, about 40 feet above the American falls. In the pockets were found some small change, several small articles and a nickle watch; four cards were found bearing the address: "Jacob J. Kirchner, dealer and manufacturer of cigars, Brantford, Ont," and in one corner, "presented by Geo. Kirschner." The keeper of the park lunch house states that a man wearing the coat was in the lunch house yesterday, and asked for a drink, stating that he was broke. The drink was refused, and the stranger said he was going over the falls. It looks as though he had kept his word.

RUSSIA'S RULER RAGES.

He is Greatly Excited Over the Porte's Defiance—Deceived by His Ambassador.

The Sultan's Grant of Investiture to Bulgarian Bishops the Cause of His Anger.

ST. PETERSBURG, Aug. 3.—Danger of serious trouble in the east of Europe seems to be somewhat increased by the recent occurrences in Constantinople and the action of England in persuading the Sultan to grant berettas of investiture to the Bulgarian bishops in Macedonia. The Czar is astonished and greatly excited over the Porte's defiance of the St. Petersburg government and its utter disregard of Russia's protest against this course. Advices which were received here from M. Nelidoff, the Russian ambassador at Constantinople, led the Czar to believe that the Sultan would submit to his admonitions. The Czar, however, visits all the blame of the Sultan's cavalier treatment of himself upon his diplomatic representative.

M. Nelidoff left Stamboul for Sebastopol last night. He goes away, ostensibly on a holiday, but it is well understood here that he really is under the ban of the Czar, who has lost all confidence in him. The Czar has openly in the court circle complained of, what he calls, Nelidoff's deception, and he added, with every show of rage and distrust: "I cannot rely on a single one of my diplomats. They all lie. They always promise but never fulfill their promises."

The absence of the Russian envoy from Stamboul, at this time, implies that there will be considerable delay in the action of Russia in this peculiar crisis, so that no immediate complications are to be looked for.

AFFAIRS AT WELLINGTON.

Detachments from "C" Battery and Garrison Artillery Sent to the Mines.

Strikers Continue to Hiss, Hoot and Intimidate the Men who Decide to Work.

Discontent Mainly Expressed by the Belgians—Back of the Strike Believed to be Broken.

In order to anticipate the possibility of riot and bloodshed at Nanaimo, a requisition, signed by three magistrates, was on Monday evening presented to the senior officer in command of the militia, asking that a detachment of military be sent to Wellington to supplement the efforts of the special police in preserving order and protecting property. In answer to the requisition, Lt.-Col. Holmes, D.A.G., ordered thirty men of "C" battery R.C.A., to hold themselves in readiness to go to Wellington, and requested Major Nicholls to parade an equal number from the three headquarter batteries of the B.C.B.G.A. at the drill shed in full marching order, at noon. Ten men were accordingly drawn from each battery, and under the command of Capt. Quinlan, the detachment, thirty strong, took their departure by special train at 1.30 p.m. They were joined by the "C" battery contingent at Russell station, and the entire force reached Nanaimo safely last evening. They were supplied with ball cartridges, 60 rounds being supplied each man. During the day the telegraph company had orders from headquarters not to transmit any messages to the strikers notifying them that the military were going up.

WELLINGTON, Aug. 5.—On account of a break in the wires it was impossible to send you details of the processions of yesterday. In the morning there were about 75 participants in that demonstration, who, among other things, have the banner of the Knights of Labor. The procession which was designed to intimidate the miners who were prepared to work and such others as had an inclination that way, ought never to have been allowed, and would never have been tolerated had there been a sufficient force of police. It howled and jeered, the Marseillaise and other recognized revolutionary songs being sung. Having traversed the highway and cross-road—the latter private property—and having gone wherever it was possible to see a miner or to let their voices be effectively heard, they, as it were, encamped over against No. 5 shaft, and took a rest. Presently they rolled up their flags and quietly dispersed. In the afternoon, shortly before the time for the men to get back from their labours, the strikers started out again and hissed and hooted the workers as they passed them, either on foot or in the cars by which they had been conveyed to and from the more distant pits. One man, a foreigner, was particularly noticeable for his excesses. Indeed, it may be said that three-quarters or seven-eighths, perhaps, of the demonstrators were other than English-speaking, that element not appearing to take kindly to such things. It is certain that these processions which, according to the Nanaimo Free Press, are designed to shame the non-union men, and will be continued every day, morning and evening, will be stopped, no matter the cost, for they really amount to terrorism of the worst description. Many of the men concerned being pronounced socialists, whose presence, if it does not cause fear, gives rise to apprehension as to attempt to disturb public order. Last night it was announced that the demonstration, having been a comparative failure, owing to the hurried manner in which it had been organized, those of to-day would be much more effective and would be taken part in by men from Nanaimo and Northfield. This gave zest to the drillings in which the local miners were participants, and it must be said that they were apt learners under the direction of the instructor, who seemed to be well posted in military evolutions. Nothing occurred during the night in any way out of the ordinary routine, but the question is: "What next?"

This morning the men assembled as usual to proceed to

when it was found that two men were missing, having, it was reported, been scared away by the threats that had been made, while two men came to work who said that they would have remained away until the strike was over had it not been for the manifest intention to scare them. One of them, an elderly man, strongly denounced the flagrant attack on their liberties. The strikers, he said, pretended to be acting in the interest of the men, and to be defending their rights, but their present action destroyed all confidence in them and was calculated to enormously prejudice the movement. It has been learned that in the case of the absentees they were visited in their houses and had all possible influences brought to bear upon them.

The deputation from Nanaimo and Northfield, who were expected to be present and take part in this morning's attempt to terrorize, did not turn up by the time the whistle blew, and so the men got to their work unmolested. It is expected, however, that some time during the day there would be a miners' show, when all who can be induced to do so will by the force of their numbers seek to strike fear into the hearts of those whom they cannot otherwise influence. It is no use, as the old saying is, for one to hulloo until he is out of the wood; but it may be said that, unless the most illegal devices are followed, the back of the strike has been broken—not that the most persistent endeavors may not be made to establish the rule of boycottism, but because work having been resumed care will be taken that at least the law shall be respected, violation of which, in spirit, if not in absolute letter, —can alone secure the success of the effort to restrain the unruly and protect the individual in the free and unrestricted exercise of his labor and his rights as a man and a Canadian citizen. Particulars are not yet to hand of the two cases of intimidation spoken of above, but it is said that they were most flagrant. It is thought here that the two representatives of the district, both of them the nominees of the miners, should take special care that the law is not violated by their friends, and should use all their influence to prevent such a contingency, which would be a calamity of the worst description, as being the inauguration of a war of class against class. More moderation in the demands and the conditions of those demands would, it is said, have prevented at the very outset a condition of things which has in reality been disastrous to all concerned. As a rule the miners are sober and well behaved as individuals, but somehow or other the demonstrativeness of every description has so far come mainly from the foreigners, who if let loose, may do things that will hereafter be talked about and that with sorrow.

ARRIVAL OF THE MILITARY.

WELLINGTON, B. C., Aug 5.—Gemmill and Houghton, who quit work this morning, declared to your reporter they were not intimidated but had left of their own free will. There is no excitement of any kind except in anticipation of what might happen in view of current reports as to the character of the procession. Soon after three o'clock this p. m. miners began to gather on the highway at the end of the station ground, and presently were brought along the flag of the Knights of Labor, that of the Miners Union, and a gallows on which was hung up a blackleg. The men, principally foreigners, drew up on each side of the road, apparently to await the arrival of the miners on their way back from work, and employed the time by lying on the grass and singing la Marsellaise and labor songs. Their numbers were no more than the previous day, the miners not having arrived from Nanaimo and Northfield. Time hung heavy on their hands and scouts went out to see what was the matter. Presently it became known that a detachment of military had arrived from Victoria, and at once a break was made for the railway track, where it was reported the military were disembarking. Proceeding thither, and bearing their emblems, they went round to the soldiers, who were marching up, and then drew up opposite the depot, the soldiers coming up in front of it. It being suggested to Col. Holmes that he had better disperse the processionists, he said he could not interfere so long as they were peaceable. The soldiers having been called to attention, the colonel addressed them as to their duty to themselves as individuals and to the citizens with whom they would be called upon to mix. He urged them to adhere strictly to discipline, to give noone cause of offence, which he did not anticipate, nor did he expect trouble with the people. They were only to wear their side arms when out, and never when on duty to fire without direct orders for him. Col. Holmes then went among the processionists and entered into conversation with the leaders and some others. The advent of the military caused some stir, and a large number of peopleturned out to see them, looking on in stolid silence. The military made their headquarters in the cars, where they are to consider themselves ready for duty by day and by night. They get their meals at the Wellington Hotel. The procession to-day was quiet, even before the advent of the military, and to-night they did not come across the miners returning from work. They were spoken to by Magistrate Planta, who instructed them not to carry out the hanging of the effigy, which they at once destroyed, and to be careful of breaking the peace. He asked them as a favor not to continue the procession, which could do no good.

THE BEHRING SEA QUESTION.

TO THE EDITOR:—The following letter was written for publication in the Oregonian, and was intended for Americans, but as it is a question that deeply concerns Victorians, I take the liberty of furnishing you a copy for publication:

In the present interesting state of the question new points are constantly arising, and it is well that the American public should obtain a thorough understanding of the subject.

It is becoming apparent that the English goverment has decided to take a firmer stand than she has heretofore taken, and she has quietly collected a fleet of war vessels at Esquimait equal to any emergency that may arise. In the meantime the American government seems inclined to recede a little. While this may be somewhat humiliating to some Americans, it is really the first sensible step the government has taken in the whole business. One thing is certain, the British vessels have gone into the Behring Sea, and it also seems apparent that they have done so under some assurance that they would not be molested. This brings it to what may be a state secret, but it must come out in due time. The question is, have the owners of the vessels received an intimation from the American government that they would not be seized, or have they had assurance from their own government that they would be protected. If the first proposition should be true how does it place our own sealers? There has been no rescinding of the President's proclamation, and so far as I can learn no notice to the American vessels that they might enter the sea. Therefore shall we have the sorry spectacle presented of British vessels entering the sea and taking seals with impunity, while our own are not allowed to enter.?

Just think of the British vessels sailing proudly in under the protection of their flag while the unfortunate American must stay out or steal in like a thief in the night, deeming no danger so appalling as the sight of his own country's flag flying from some government vessel.

But there is a point in this question that seems to me to have been overlooked altogether. The San Francisco Examiner in its issue of June 25th, discussing the question, says that "if we remain firm our rights in the eastern portion of the sea will be as undisputed as those of Russia in the western portion."

PORT CRESCENT.

A FEW UNDENIABLE FACTS:

President T. F. Oakes says the Victoria, Port Crescent and Chehalis Railway will be completed by the 31st December, 1891. This will make Port Crescent the terminus of the strongest corporation on the American Continent. Work on the breakwater will commence immediately and will be completed during next year; the Harbor will then accommodate 120 ships, allowing one cable (see Minard on Harbors) to each large merchant vessel in which to swing, not including twice that number which might be tied up to wharves. Port Crescent will then be possessed of one of the best harbors on the coast.

The soundings on the Company's Map are guaranteed to be correct.

More than 3,000,000 acres of the richest land in the State of Washington, lying to the West and Southwest, are directly tributary to Port Crescent.

It is confidently predicted that in ten years the population of Port Crescent will rival that of Tacoma and Seattle combined.

We strongly recommend to our friends and the public generally the advisability of securing a few lots at present prices. Lots, that to-day can be bought for hundreds, will be worth in a few months as many thousands. We have a limited number of choice lots at present on sale.

MAN'S DIVISION OF TIME

For Work, Recreation and Rest—Rev. Mr. Beanlands Gives His Views on the Labor Question.

In Christ Church Cathedral on Sunday morning, Rev. A. Beanlands chose for the subject of his sermon the "Eight Hour a Day" question, and a representative gathering of the workingmen was present. The text taken was Psalms CIV. 23:

"Man goeth forth to his work and to his labor until the evening."

The reverend gentleman said: In the eye of God all men are laborers. Such at least would seem to be the lesson of this verse. The Psalmist sees the Almighty as at the beginning calling into existence the manifold works of His creation. Among these he beholds the various beings which inhabit this earth, each occupied in some characteristic way. The whale is sporting in the waters, the birds are nesting amid the trees, droves of wild asses and antelope quench their thirst by the stream, herds of cattle graze upon the pastures while on the rocky hillsides the wild goat is seen bounding from crag to crag. Darkness falls and the prowling beasts of prey come forth, and the lions are heard roaring in the night. At sunrise they shirk back to their lairs, and "man goeth forth to his work and to his labor until the evening." How striking is the transition from the wild, irregular search after food of the king of beasts, to the steady, systematic, intelligent toil of the poorest among men.

Not that there is no labor in the life of the brutes, nay the very plants in a certain sense toil and spin, for God abhors slothful inactivity and refuses to prolong the life that does not work. But that man is distinguished by deliberate effort, the laborer of the will. And thus he is shown to us as the crown of God's creative work, in whose image he is the more nearly made, because he, too, can work. What then, my brethren, is the reward peculiar to the exercise of this gift? It is wealth—the accumulation of the fruits of labor over and above bare necessity. Man alone is able to store for the permanent benefit and higher development of the race, wealth of goods and wealth of knowledge, the stocked-up labors of the past that may place upon a higher level the work of the future. When our Saviour worked his miracle of the loaves and fishes, he was but imitating his divine Father's creative acts; when he said to his disciples "Gather up the fragments that nothing be lost," he taught at once the lesson of God's generosity and God's thrift; for in all His works there is a superabundance, yet His intelligence never wastes; and when his disciples as their reward gathered twelve baskets full which remained over and above to them that had eaten, they were but participating in that wealth which is the reward of prudent care and intelligent labor. Wealth then, my brethern, is not the antagonist of labour, but is an incident to labour, for in the homely language of the north country,

"work must a' gone to the getting Wherever money were got."

A great deal is continually being put forth now-a-days about the strife between labor and capital. It is wrong thus to inflame men's passions, for there can be no strife between these things, and a false and injurious view of their relations is brought about by such talk. In the struggle of self interest which rages through life, some men will always try and get more for their money than its worth, and others will try as keenly to get more for their work than it is worth. And so there will ever be grinding masters and unprofitable servants; but this is by reason of the hardness of our hearts. Labour is good, and wealth is its reward, and these blessings of God must not be represented as opposed the one to the other. Where better can this be recognized than in our Province, my brethern, where every man works and every working man may gather basketfuls over and above that which he has eaten. We are all working men here. The employers of labour are themselves labourers. Now the clergy of this city have been asked in the name of their Master to speak upon the eight hours' system as it is called. The threefold division of the day into 8 hours for compulsory labour, 8 hours for leisure, and 8 hours for rest, appears to be a very desirable one. There is little doubt that 8 hours of labour well spent ought to provide a man with the necessities of life in whatever sphere his labour is employed. But it must be distinctly understood that as in those 8 hours he has practically no choice of occupation, and as in the second 8 hours the charms consists in the fact that he can then employ that choice which he has hitherto been refused, so no legislation would be healthy which in any degree limited the lawful exercise of his choice. And there will always be as infinite variety of choice as there is variety of employment. One man will occupy his leisure by work of one kind, another by work of some other kind. No matter whether it be sport, or reading, exercise of body, exercise of mind; no matter whether he stay in the factory to work overtime or build himself a house, or plant himself a garden, or take out his wife and family, or talk over affairs with his friends it is all work, it all has an object. It is only the slothful and the dissolute in whose pleasure there is no profit, and whose recreation is but the creation of death. The poor man, then, must be on his guard as well as the rich man against exercising a tyranny over his fellows. "A poor man that oppresseth the poor is like a sweeping rain that leaveth no food." Even so if a workman chose through the power of his union to tyrannize over industrious fellows who would rather employ their leisure to earn money than in the pursuit of some other occupation, he is quite as reprehensible as the master who exacts over long hours. Again, it would no doubt be a comfortable thing for mankind if they would all agree to work at their special trades only eight hours a day, but unless those who are their own masters agreed as well as those who employ assistants, there would be risk of a serious wrong which would soon re-act upon the workman in a reduction of wages. It occurs to me that if I employ a shoemaker who chooses to work 10 hours a day to make me a pair of boots, and he values his work at $3 a day, he could hardly afford to let me have them at the same price if he engaged an assistant to to make them at the same wage, yet the assistant only worked 8 hours a day. Nor will he be able in the face of competition to exact a higher price, but he will reduce the wages of his assistant in the proportion of 8 to 10. The consideration of such cases as this, my brethren, which would come to be reduplicated in every craft and trade, makes me hesitate before forcing an opinion which may seem excellent to me as a mere theory upon those who might suffer more than myself were it carried into practice. These economic measures cannot be treated as though everyone ought to think alike upon them, there is always a great deal to be said in their favor, but the difficulties which attend their operation do not so readily strike a man unless he be personally interested in their solution. But, my brethren, supposing the merits of the case were beyond all dispute, supposing that it were everywhere and in every instance beneficial to limit the so-called working day to eight hours, would it really be within the province of the clergy to advocate this change? When a man, with good reason we may suppose, appealed to Jesus Christ to use the influence of his divine authority to secure for him a right share of his inheritance, he was met by a strangely unsympathetic reply as it seemed. "Man," said our Lord, "who made me a judge or a divider over you." It was not that Jesus was void of a tender sympathy for anyone suffering oppression; it was not that he sided from interest with the rich and powerful, but that he would not give the authority of a spiritual mission to an act of purely wordly interest. And it is even so with us, I think. As men we may throw ourselves on one side or the other into the ranks of political struggle, using our own judgment as to what is best for the common weal like other men. But as ministers of religion we shall do better to adopt the language of Gallieo:

"If it were a matter of wrong or wicked lewdness, reason would that I should bear with you; but if it be a question of your law, look ye to it for I will be no judge of such matters."

My brethren, there are, alas, among us Christian people many matters of wrong and wicked lewdness. The mission of the church is not to change the details but the principles of life. So long as men will not listen to the Gospel of self-denial, so long as they will not take Christ's yoke and learn of Him, no change in the conditions of their life will make them more noble or more pure. Do not, my brethren, misjudge us, or think that we are hired by self-interest to withstand the progress of the lowly and the poor. God forbid that the followers of Him who was content to be so lowly and so poor on earth should thus far thwart His will. But to a man sad by experience of the hearts of men comes a profound mistrust of all outward measures of reform. Whosoever hath much, of him much shall be expected. We have more, far more, than our fathers, more comfort, more security, more knowledge, more liberty. And now we want more time also. With such additional opportunities shall we be more thoughtful or more frivolous, more pure or more licentious, more self-denying or more self-indulgent? It is the uncertainty of our answer to this which makes us fear to advise in such a matter. Shall we find more time for the worship of God when two hours have been released to us from our slavery to Mammon? The day is coming when the Son of Man, the man of toil and sorrow, the man of love and loss, shall judge every one of us according to his works. It will be better in that day for the slave who had no time to sin than for the free man who used his liberty and time that he might sin the more. It will be better in that day for the over-worked peasant who could but bow his head and fold his hands at the sound of the Angelus, than for him who spends his leisure in learning to forget God.

The Gospel of our laboring Saviour is addressed to rich and poor alike, "Come unto me all ye that labour and are heavy laden." It is only those that labor that are invited to Christ. There is, my brethren, a toil that no 8-hour movement can shorten; there is a heavy burden that no legislation can lighten. One is the message of deliverance from the labor of sin from the weight of human woe. But it is a message of more work instead of less work, of longer instead of shorter hours: "Take my yoke upon you and learn of me. For I am meek and lowly of heart." How long, my brethren, shall it be before we listen to that voice? How long will the cares of this world, or deceitful riches persuade us against the service of the gentlest of Masters?

"My yoke is easy and my burden is light, and ye shall find rest unto your souls." Only the heavy laden shall take that easy yoke; only the weary shall find rest.

ITSELF AGAIN.

The organ of the Opposition is tired trying to appear to be good. The garb of political decency did not fit it. It felt while wearing it most uncomfortable, so on Monday evening it threw it off, and again appears in its natural state.

A few days ago it declared that the Government's new land policy would have its cordial support, but after two or three day's reflection it declared that: "The Times would not support the Government under any circumstances, and least of all would it slobber over them for promulgating a policy which was virtually wrung from them by main force." Our contemporary's determination is not very delicately or elegantly expressed, but it is exactly what we expected. We did not think that it would repent of its good resolution so very soon, but we were satisfied that it would before long find a pretext for acting on its old principle "against the Government right or wrong." There is an old saying about leopards and Ethiopians and the action of the Times is only another proof of its truth. The Times, to use its own classic language, has "no use for and confidence in the Government in whatsoever guise it may see fit to masquerade."

The Times is now ready to aid those who disapprove of the Government's land policy in their attempts to embarass and hamper the Administration and generally to bring it into disrepute. The enemies which Mr. Robson and his colleagues make by doing what the Times knows to be right will find in that paper a zealous ally ready to do them every harm they may devise. The "cordial support" has been in a few days transformed into deadly enmity which will take advantage of the Government's efforts to make the public domain available to those only who propose to cultivate and improve it, to do it all the harm that disappointed land grabbers can invent. The declarations of the Times mean that the Government's enemies are its friends and that it will help them to injure it, no matter what may be the cause of their hostility or its object.

There are very few who would confess their utter want of principle so openly or so coarsely as the Times does, but we for our part are glad to see it throwing off the mask which fitted it so badly and which after all concealed so little. Let the Government's policy be what it may it must reckon upon finding in the Times and its inspirers bitter and irreconcilable enemies. This shows that the Times opposes the Government on personal and not on public grounds. If "the Quintette," which is the new name that the Times has invented for the Government, administered the public affairs of the country as well as it is possible for a government to administer them, they would find in the Times an unreconciled and an irreconcilable foe. It is, according to the showing of the Times itself, the men who form the Government whom it opposes and not their policy. It cares nothing for the country. The end of its existence is to drive the five men who form the Government from power and, of course, to put in their place five other men. This is certainly not patriotic, and there are people who would call it mean and narrow, and deserving the contempt of all fair-minded and public-spirited men who judge governments by their acts. But this is the object of the Times and it may be supposed to know its own aims and to understand its own motives.

The organ of the Opposition speaks of the land policy which has been abandoned by the Robson Government as having been initiated by the party in power. The truth is, it was an improvement on the policy pursued by Mr. Beaven and his party when they held the reins of power. When the Walkem-Beaven Government were in office Crown land was sold to all comers for one dollar an acre, and the tax on wild lands was only five cents an acre. The Smithe Government saw that these very easy terms afforded too many facilities for men to obtain land for merely speculative purposes, and it raised the price to two dollars and a half an acre and seven and a half cents wild land tax. Here was an increase of one hundred and fifty per cent. on the price of land and fifty per cent. on the land tax. This very large increase has not deterred the speculators, so the Robson Government, composed of members of the same party as supported the Smithe Ministry, has come to the conclusion that the time has arrived in which still greater obstacles must be placed in the way of the land-grabber, so no Crown land is to be sold to any but actual settlers. This is progress in the same direction and on the same basis as the reforms effected by the Smithe Administration and it is an immense improvement on the policy pursued by Mr. Beaven and the party which supported him. But the Times never told its readers that Mr. Beaven gave the speculators a free hand, that when he had the direction of affairs speculators could get all the land they coveted and at almost nominal rates.

The organ, in search of a pretext for its opposition to the Robson Government, throws on its members the responsibility of the miscarriage of Mr. Haslam's bill to prevent the employment of Chinamen in the coal mines. This is amusing. The Times knows well that the gentleman who had charge of that bill was not a member of the Government, and that it was in no sense a Government measure. It was as much the business of Mr. Beaven, Mr. Grant, Mr. Semlin, Mr. Ladner and Mr. Orr to look after that bill and to see that it was perfect in all its details as it was that of the members of the Government and their followers. Whatever blame attaches to members of the Assembly for allowing that bill to pass in a defective condition must be borne by the members of the Opposition as well as by the supporters of the Government. Why does not the Times denounce Mr. Beaven and the Government for having permitted that bill to be a failure. They "sat by and permitted Mr. Haslam to legislate imperfectly" as well as Mr. Robson and the Attorney-General. Their business as they have over and over again defined it is to criticise and find fault. Why were they blind and dumb while so important a measure was before them? They were, according to the Times, guilty of "gross hypocrisy," they were acting the part of "Uriah Heep." Why does not the organ lash them and repudiate them as its leaders? The position of the Organ on this land reform business is not a little ridiculous.

THE WELLINGTON DISTURBANCE.

It is very greatly to be regretted that the miners who refuse to work in the Wellington mines on the Messrs. Dunsmuir's terms, do not refrain from interfering with the men who are willing to work. They submitted the terms on which they would continue to work, which were not accepted. One would think that as the miners and mine owners could not agree, the best thing that could be done was to part. The Messrs. Dunsmuir had no right to interfere with the miners, and the miners had no right to meddle with the Messrs. Dunsmuir. But the miners do not look at the matter in this common-sense way. They have exercised their right as free men to refuse to work on terms that they did not like, but they appear to think that the mine owners should not exercise their right to work their mines as they see fit.

When the mines were re-opened these miners, who have discharged themselves, walked in procession to the mines and reproached the men who are willing to work. The men, in going to their work and returning from the mine, are escorted by the unemployed men, who denounce them with much bitterness. "It is," we are told by the Nanaimo Free Press, "the intention of the Union miners to escort these miners to their work night and morning with the evident intention of trying to shame them if possible." It can easily be understood that when the miners are few and the escort numerous this process cannot go on for any length of time without a resort to violence by one party or the other. The result is as certain as that the report of the gun follows the flash.

What would be done in this city if a discharged employe persisted in escorting the man who was employed in his stead to and from his work reproaching him the while for working while it pleased him to be idle? The escort would in a very short time make the acquaintance of the policemen and would be required to give an account of his conduct to the stipendiary magistrate. And very properly so. The man had a right to work, and he had also a right to go to and from his work without being subjected to annoyance. The business of the government is to protect him in the exercise of his lawful rights and if it did not do so it would not fulfil the end of its existence.

No man or no body of men is invested with the power "to shame" the miners who have gone back to their work and we will be surprised to find that any Union has authorized the Belgian or any other workmen to harrass those Wellington miners. We are quite sure that such a proceeding would not meet the approbation of Mr. Powderly or any of the leaders of the labor movement.

These Wellington miners possess the rights of all other subjects of the Queen. The law must be supreme and men must be protected in the exercise of their lawful rights in the village of Wellington as well as in the city of Victoria. The miners must be preserved from annoyance and intimidation and violence.

They have a right to the protection of law, and the authorities in extending to them that protection are doing a duty which they could not neglect or avoid.

We did think when we saw how indignantly the mere rumor of violence being used was denied by the leading men of the labor organizations in Nanaimo and elsewhere that not only would the Union not encourage any breach of the law or any demonstration calculated to bring about a breach of the law, but that it would use its influence to make disorder and violence impossible at Wellington.

There is no excuse for subjecting the Wellington miners to annoyance and insult. They are not taking the bread out of the mouths of any man, woman or child in Wellington or Nanaimo. Every man in the procession formed to shame them into refusing work might, if he chose, find employment in the mine at fair wages. They are not idle for want of employment, or because they could not earn enough to live on when they were at work or that work was refused them. They are idle because they would not work, on the terms and under the conditions that have obtained in Wellington for many years, and which thousands of miners have been glad to accept. Their case is not one of hardship. They, of course had a right to make their own bargain, but when they could not agree with their employers, they were in the same position as hundreds of thousands of good men in every country under the sun. They cannot get all they want or even all they consider their due. But unlike the Wellington strikers they take what they can get and wait patiently for a favorable opportunity to better their circumstances. As we have seen, the condition of these men if they had gone back to work was very far from being an uncomfortable one, they are therefore not like men who have been driven by misery which had become intolerable to violate the laws of the land.

We do trust that wise counsels will prevail in Wellington and that the men on strike will see the folly and the wickedness of placing themselves in opposition to the law. If the miners of Wellington and Nanaimo do not approve of the course which the Messrs. Dunsmuir are taking the wise way is to accord to them and those whom they employ the freedom of action which they claim for themselves and which they exercise, as long as it is within lawful bounds, without let or hindrance.

SKIN DISEASES

A CLERGYMAN'S TESTIMONIAL.

About two years ago I was attacked with an inflammatory disease on my face (petyriasis), which was very troublesome, being extremely itchy and painful, giving rise to the production of small, bran-like scales. My general health was affected by it. I used the CUTICURA RESOLVENT, CUTICURA, and CUTICURA SOAP according to directions, and experienced a change from the very first day; they worked wonderfully, and by their continued use for about five months I was completely cured. I have unbounded faith in the CUTICURA REMEDIES. I regard the CUTICURA RESOLVENT as the very best blood purifier; a trial will convince any one. The CUTICURA SOAP is the best in the market, and cheap at twice its present price. I shall use no other for the toilet and bath. With the prevalence of skin diseases among us as a people (and they are the most difficult to deal with), I regard the CUTICURA REMEDIES of more important and intrinsic value to the world than any other medicine now before the public. I am, with deep gratitude.

SECRETARY (pro tem.)—J. C. Bales.

This Company is formed for the purpose of acquiring and extending the well-known and old established business of "The Vancouver Ale, Porter and Steam Beer Brewery," in the City of Victoria.

The promoters confidently expect, by the aid of capital and influence, to largely extend the business and introduce the production of Lager Beer, for which there is a large and growing demand throughout the Province. They will also shortly commence distilling.

The quantity of Lager Beer passed through the Custom House, Victoria, B. C., for the six months ended December 21st, 1889, was as follows, i. e., 13,430 gallons in bottles, 12,705 gallons in casks.

The quantity of spirits passed through the Inland Revenue Office for the year ended 30th June last was 66,019.93 proof gallons, and probably an addition of 50 per cent. may be made to this for lots entered duty paid.

Shares are offered to the public for subscription by a deposit of 50 per cent. per share on allotment, and the balance by assessments as required; no one assessment to exceed 10 per cent. of the subscribed capital.

Forms of application may be had of the promoters or secretary. jly25-tf

An Important Council Session.

Council meets this evening with a bill of fare that promises some interesting proceedings. Public interest is centering on the sewage question, and it is supposed, from the fact that the committee will present their report, that this will be the chief topic under discussion.

Still Doing Business.

We are very busy at Hastie & Erskine's, 62 Government street, but are still taking orders for furniture, for we have a very large and choice supply on hand Every taste can be suited, and the prices are the lowest in the city, for we have bought in the best markets. Call and see us.

Sewerage Matters.

There was to have been a meeting of the Sewerage committee to day, at which much important discussion was to have taken place, but the committee have now put off the meeting, stating that they have made their report and have it in readiness to submit to Council this evening. In that case the discussion is only deferred.

A Correction.

In the communication signed "Peter," in yesterday's issue, the sentence beginning: "If the Mayor had really an idea that the 'single tax' is unjust in principle," should read: "If the Mayor had really an idea that the 'single tax' is right in principle." The typographical error made "Peter" say exactly the opposite of what he intended.

What the Ladies Say.

A lady told us yesterday that she could beat an egg stiffer with a Keystone beater in one minute than she could with an ordinary beater in 10 minutes. And then it is an ice cream freezer, breakfast churn, etc., besides with a cook book thrown in. She says it is the best novelty McLennan & McFeely have. She thinks she knows.

"Complaint is Made."

Information has been laid with Mr. Milne, custom collector, to the effect that the missionary steamer Glad Tidings has been engaging in passenger business without the necessary license, and the complaint is supplemented by another to the effect that she is carrying an uncertificated engineer. Mr. Milne will investigate the matter, and if the complaint should be found to have any foundation in fact he will have it rectified.

Gentle Hints.

The Council at its last meeting made a few suggestions which have been the means of doing more good than a lengthy discussion. A hint was thrown out about the dirty state of the police yard and immediately next morning workmen were busily employed clearing up the rubbish. Mention was made of the facilities afforded prisoners for bolting from the yard, and now a substantial fence is in place, thoroughly protecting and enclosing the station yard. Another remark might probably clear up the sidewalk outside which is in a dangerous state, and still another hint might direct the attention of the street committee to the foot crossing on Douglas street spread with a carpet of stones as sharp as knives and just as destructive.

Police Peregrinations.

There were two adjourned cases at the police court yesterday morning, and they were further adjourned. This is admirable forethought on the part of the police, for if a case were not adjourned now and then, the police court would be an obsolete institution in a week or two. There was no necessity in the present instance, for a familiar name was heard when "Thomas A. Pope" was thrice shouted outside the court in stentorian tones by Officer Hawton. There was not even an echo in response, Thomas was not within hearing. It transpired shortly afterwards, however, that he was "indisposed" and had sent a message to the sergeant asking that kind-hearted official to excuse him to his honor and explain the circumstances of the case. The charge was for leaving a cart in the middle of the street; attached to the cart must have been a horse, for the natural inference is that a horse, and not Thomas, must have drawn it there. Anyhow, the charge only mentioned a cart. His honor adjourned the case till to-day. Hardly had he done so when Thomas came in, and, having learned that his case was adjourned, he rose up once more and departed.

Minor Matters.

At a special meeting of the council of the Board of Trade, held yesterday morning, the new secretary, Mr. F. Elworthy, was duly installed into his position, before the discussion of the few matters before the meeting was entered into. Mr. Robert Ward, president of the Board, announced that he had during the visit of the hon. Minister of the Interior, interviewed that gentleman in reference to the grievances of the Fraser river salmon canners caused by the recently issued fishery regulations. Hon. Mr. Dewdney advised the reference of the matter to the Minister of Marine and Fisheries, whose intention it was to visit British Columbia very shortly. Another member of the council stated that he had approached the same hon. gentleman in regard to an additional grant toward the improvement of Victoria harbor. He received the usual diplomatic answer that the matter would receive consideration.

The president reported verbally having been informed by General Manager Geo. H. Rice, of the Pacific Mail S.S. Co., in reference to their intention to make Victoria terminus on both outward and inward trips. Full particulars of the Pacific Mail's plans have already been given in THE COLONIST. There was no further business discussed.

Thirty Thistle Cases.

Something in the neighborhood of between twenty and thirty thistle prosecutions will come before the police magistrate in a couple of days. Property owners who have neglected the notice to have this nuisance abated, will be forcibly reminded of the fact when fined for it.

A Violin School.

Prof. Granat has decided to open a school for the violin for male and female pupils. The classes will be held each Tuesday and Friday afternoons. It is his intention to form classes according to the number and proficiency of the pupils attending. The experiment is an interesting one and has many inducements.

Damage Not Worth Mentioning.

The Claymore rides at anchor now as neat-looking as possible. The damage done at her launching was very slight, the cause being a defect in one of the blocks holding her on the ways. The task of repairing only cost a few dollars, leaving her just as sound as before launching. She will be ready for sea in a couple of days, and it is expected to create a stir in sailing circles.

St. Andrew's Festival.

Ice cream is not the only attraction at the festival to take place this evening at St. Andrew's. There will be music of a vocal and instrumental character which will make the evening very interesting and enjoyable. Every effort has been made to ensure its success and there is every promise of this object being attained.

Art Association.

A meeting of the British Columbia Art association was held in the rooms in the Bank of B. C. building yesterday, when ten new members were admitted. His Honor the Lieut.-Governor has become a patron of the society, which will hold an exhibition in the new city hall in September next. Very many good paintings, the work of Victoria artists, will be shown.

McIntosh; samples, Mrs. Hutcheson; milk, Mr. Andeun.

The Natural History Society.

The Natural History society have chartered a steam tug for Saturday next. It is the intention to leave Johnson street wharf at 8 o'clock and go on a dredging tour off Victoria and Esquimalt harbors. She will return to the Outer wharf at 2 o'clock in the afternoon for those who may have missed the first trip. Members desiring to go on this pleasant excursion should communicate with the secretary.

No Foundation in Fact.

A dispatch appeared recently in a San Francisco paper to the effect that Capt. Dan McLean was not likely to bring the sealing schooner Mary Ellen back to Victoria. Mr. Morris Moss, of this city, was spoken to on the subject. He says there is no foundation whatever in the report. He has every reason to believe that Capt. McLean endeavored to put his skins on board the Mischief while that boat was up there. She, however, was loaded when he got down, and he started for Sand point to catch the Aurora, but was too late.

B.C.R.A.

By the Islander arriving last night the following representative riflemen came down from the Mainland to take part in the annual prize meeting of the Provincial Rifle Association, which opens this morning, on the new range at Goldstream: From New Westminster—Lieut. Cotton, Corp. Turnbull, Corp. Townsend, Pte. Fletcher, Gunners Isles, Cameron and Sharpe, Messrs. Jas. Wilson and D, R. McElmen. From Vancouver—Capt. Thompson, Messrs. H. Collins and Sewart. Others are expected to arrive to-night to complete the team from that city in the Laurie Bugle match. The opening match, the first on the list, commences at 10 o'clock. Trains leave at 8 o'clock sharp.

A Big, Big Whale Story.

It is reported from Plumper's Pass that, a few days ago, an enormous shark attacked a whale and a terrible semi-submarine conflict took place, which was watched with deep interest and anxiety by many persons. The shark, by a desperate rush, tore the intestines out of the whale, which came to the surface a moment later, dead. The water for several acres around was purple with bloody foam and the undevoured eternal machinery of the giant mammal. The shark, after making a hearty lunch off the remains, is said to have rolled his bright green eyes longingly on the assembled spectators, struck the water three times with his tail and vanished.—Columbian.

The Late Harry P. Shakespeare.

The remains of the late Harry P. Shakespeare were brought over from Seattle last evening and will be interred this afternoon, the funeral leaving the residence of the distressed parents, corner Hillside avenue and Blanchard street, at 2 o'clock, and half-an-hour later from the Gorge road church. The particulars of how the young man lost his life are, briefly, as follows:—At about 3 o'clock on Sunday morning Sam Casel, who lives on Commercial street wharf, was awakened by his wife, who told him that she had heard someone fall into the water. Both rushed to the spot only to see the unfortunate young man sinking for the last time. Casel would have jumped in even then, but was restrained by his wife, who feared that he, too, might lose his life. The assistance of a couple of men, who sleep in a barn across the street, was asked, but they refused to do anything, saying that it was too late. The tide ebbed, and when the sun rose it left the body exposed to the view of passers-by. At 9 o'clock, Justice Miller and the undertakers went to the scene and removed the remains, and took them to the undertaking parlors. Coroner Smart, after viewing the remains, concluded that an inquest was unnecessary, as the drowning was plainly accidental. The deceased, who was employed in Moran's foundry, Seattle, had intended returning to Victoria on the 10th. His untimely death is keenly felt by his parents.

The Wicked World.

This pretty comedy was repeated last evening with even better success than on the opening night. The natural mistakes of a first night performance were corrected, the angularities of the piece were softened, and the play pleased all who witnessed it. Mr. Adderley and the clever and obliging amateurs who form his class in the production of The Wicked World have added another success to their score.

Skirl o' the Pipes.

On Saturday evening next the boards at The Victoria will be occupied by Mr. Robert McKenzie Munro, whose grace and dexterity in the intricate Scotch dances have won him fame and popularity everywhere he has appeared. His successes have not all been confined to dancing; he is a piper of no mean accomplishments, it being said that he is capable of performing on Scotland's great instrument feats that have hitherto been considered impossible. Fancy hearing an English waltz or an Irish melody on a Scotch bagpipes! Mr. Munro can play both and afford enjoyment as well as surprise.

The C.P.R. Employees' Excursion.

On Saturday, Aug. 16, the employees of the C.P.R. will make an excursion to Victoria. The excursionists will leave Vancouver at 7 a. m., on the Union Steamship company's vessel Cutch, and on their arrival at Nanaimo, will be met by a special train which will convey them to Victoria, the whole trip taking four and a half hours. One of the events will be a lacrosse match between Vancouver and Victoria, and the party will also visit all points of interest, such as the dry dock, the fleet and the government buildings. The return train will leave Victoria at 7 p. m., and proceed the same way home.

The Straits of Belle Isle.

The steamship Straits of Belle Isle, Captain George Gregg, which arrived at Vancouver from China and Japan on Sunday night at 8:30 o'clock, coming into dock struck the wharf and shattered a portion of the pier. The ship had a full cargo of tea, silk and rice, amounting to 2,500 tons, one cabin passenger, Mr. F. Reindorfs, 98 Chinese and 20 Japanese passengers. She left Hong Kong on July 3rd, reached Amoy July 4th, left July 6th, and arrived in Kobi July 11th. Arrived at Yokohama July 14th and left at noon, July 16th, and reached Vancouver August 3rd. Experienced thick fog a great part of the journey. The Straits of Belle Isle, which formerly bore the name of the Lord of the Isles, is a three-masted steamer of 1,580 tons burden.

An English Play in Paris.

Considerable interest centers in the engagement at the Victoria Theatre on next Monday and Tuesday of the eminent actress Maude Granger, from the fact that she will duce Richard Davey's much talked-of play "Inherited." Mr. Davey is well known in London and New York literary circles. He has been connected with the leading journals of London, and was for a time the critic of the New York Herald. His best known works are "A Royal Amour," an historical novel, "Lisbia,' a classical comedy in one act, first produced at the Lyceum Theatre, London, in September, 1888; and "Marion de Lorme," an adaptation of Victor Hugo's play produced at the Princess Theatre (London) in 1887. His latest and most successful work, "Inherited," which Miss Granger will present Monday night, was first produced in Paris a year ago under the title of "L'Heritage d Helme," Galignani in speaking of the production says: "L'Heritage d Helme" was presented before a house packed with the prominent members of the English and American colony in Paris, who had assembled to witness an unusually clever play. It was originally written in English and translated by Mr. Davey. The subject is a strong one, and has been worked out with great dramatic skill." The sale of seats for Miss Granger's engagement opens this morning at M. W. Waitt's.

The Spokane and Northern.

The Spokane Falls Chronicle says: "The Spokane & Northern railroad is eight miles south of Little Dalles, and the army of workmen are pushing ahead as rapidly as possible. The officials of the road state that within fifteen days the track will have been laid to the temporary terminus of the road, a mile above the Little Dalles, and that immediately thereafter trains will be regularly sent to the extremity of the road. On the 10th of August the steamer now being built at Revelstoke, in British Columbia, will be launched, and a week or two later will commence to make regular trips between the terminus and Revelstoke, connecting at the latter place with the Canadian Pacific railroad. The distance between the two points is about 200 miles, and it is thought the steamer will be able to accomplish it in nine or ten hours at the utmost. A peculiar and very convenient freak of nature exists at the point where the road will temporary terminate. The hard rock of the east bank of the river has been hollowed out almost in the shape of a ferry slip, and the steamer will take advantage of this safe haven. It will be impossible for high water to wrench her from her moorings, and not the least difficulty will be experienced in landing, even when the waters of the Columbia are at their most voluminous stage. A customs inspector will be placed upon the boat to prevent the smuggling of contraband goods and Chinese."

IS HE THE EARL?

Celebrated Berkeley Peerage Suit Re-Opened in England—Arguments for Hearing of the New Claim.

LONDON, Aug. 4.—The committee of privileges of the House of Lords met yesterday at Westminster for the purpose of deciding upon the arrangements for the forthcoming hearing of the case of the new claimant to the earldom of Berkeley. Contrary to practice, the case will be heard with open doors, and will bring out a good deal of the scandalous history connected with the family, and which has been vented at various times during the past century. There is already an Earl of Berkeley, but he enjoys little more than the ancient honors of the house. The present hearing, however, means a reopening of the famous Berkeley peerage case, which was twice heard before the House of Lords in the early part of the present century. The Berkeley estates consisted of about 20,000 acres of rich land in Gloucestershire and two adjacent counties, and the ancestral seat of the family was the famous historic castle of Berkeley, where Edward II. met with his horrible death, the grant having been made as far back as the reign of Henry II. On the death of the fifth Earl of Berkeley, in 1810, his eldest son presented a petition to the crown for a writ of summons as Earl of Berkeley, which was referred to the House of Lords, which came to the conclusion that the claim had not been substantiated. The fifth earl had married a Miss Mary Cole, daughter of a butcher at Wooton, near Gloucester, and the case chiefly turned on the question when he was first married to her. Beyond all doubt, on May 17, 1796, Frederick Augustus Berkeley, "bachelor," was married to Mary Cole, "spinster," at St. Mary's, Lambeth, by which time the said Mary Cole had borne the earl several children, but it was alleged that an earlier marriage took place at Berkeley in March, 1785, which had been kept secret.

In 1773, at her father's death, Mary Cole came to London to live with her sister, who was a woman of loose character. A little after she became a servant with a family in Kent, at the wages of $35 per annum. Then her sister sent for her to come back again. According to one account her sister was about being taken to prison for a debt of 100 guineas, when Lord Berkeley came to the rescue with the money in hand, and Mary Cole henceforth became his mistress. She took the name of Miss Tudor, and lived in Park street, Berkeley square, where half a dozen children were born, who were registered as the illegitimate offspring of Augustus Frederick Berkeley and Mary Cole. Lady Berkeley, however, alleged that she was all this time the lawful wife of Lord Berkeley, only the marriage had been secret on account of the light character of her sister.

She always went by the name of Miss Tudor, and once when a servant addressed her as though she was a countess, the earl blamed him for his blunder. The marriage register of Berkeley church was produced showing the entry of a marriage in March, 1785, the entry purporting to be made by a clergyman who had since died, and the witnesses to the marriage were Mary Cole's brother, a boy 12 or 15 years of age, who had signed himself "William Tudor," and a man who never had an existence. William Tudor swore that he had heard the bans of the marriage published in church, but nobody else appears to have heard them. The solicitor general in 1811 described the case as "a dreadful measure of perjury and guilt;" but Mary Cole, afterward Countess of Berkerey, always indignantly repudiated the charge of fraud made against her, and letters are now being published which she addressed to Lord Erskine, in which she passionately protests her innocence. It was alleged at the time that, by repeated threats and importunities, she at last prevailed upon the earl to make her his wife, and that then she prevailed upon her husband to join her in a plot to legitimatize the elder children by trumping up the story of a secret marriage at Berkeley. The proofs of this marriage, however, were insufficient to satisfy the House of Lords. The Earl of Berkeley, who had married Mary Cole, bequeathed the Berkeley estates to his eldest son, who in vain claimed the title. However, he received in 1831 a sort of consolation peerage, being called to the House of Lords, under the title of Lord Seagrave. He died unmarried in 1857, and his next brother succeeded to the estates, and was subsequently created Lord Fitzhardinge. At the present time Lord Fitzhardinge, son of the first lord, now holds the Berkeley estates. Mary Cole, afterwards Countess of Berkeley, succeeded virtually in her object, although the judgment of the House of Lords was against her first marriage. Four sons were born to Lord Berkeley and Mary Cole prior to their marriage at Lambeth church in 1796, and three afterwards. The eldest of the sons after the latter marriage was recognized as the carl of Berkeley, but he never assumed the title, his means were probably insufficient to support the dignity. On his death he was succeeded by his cousin, a grandson of the younger brother of the earl whose romantic marriage connection caused so much trouble in his family. His son is the present earl.

Helped Himself.

CHICAGO, Aug. 5.—George W. Harris, a mail clerk running between Chicago and St. Louis on the Chicago & Indianapolis railway, has been missing since Sunday morning, when he registered at Union Depot in St. Louis, and believed to have stolen registered mail matter valued at $5,000. Harris was head clerk and had three assistants. Within five minutes after the train arrived in St. Louis, Harris was missed and thus far no trace of him has been discovered. Yesterday afternoon a pouch which contained registered mail was found under a pile of sacks in the car. It had been cut from end to end and all of its contents taken. In describing the robbery, Post Office Inspector James Stuart said last night: "The clerks actually finish their work when the train is about 60 miles this side of St. Louis. The assistant clerks then sleep until the train stops at the depot in St. Louis, but the head clerk stays awake. Upon the arrival in St. Louis the head clerk registers at the depot his name and those of his assistants and all four accompany the mail to the post office, where receipts are given for the pouches. Harris registered all right and then disappeared. He was soon missed and the mail car and wagons were held while men searched for him, but after considerable delay the mail was taken to the post office, where one of the clerks explained and was given receipts. Harris lives in this city and has a young wife and daughter."

THE BEHRING SEA QUESTION.

Now the question may be asked, do we not go far beyond the rights that Russia ever claimed or ever conveyed to us? It seems to me we do.

In the year 1888 the British schooner "Arannah" was seized near Copper Island by a Russian officer on board one f the Alaska Commercial company's teamers. The claim set up by the owners, through the British Minister at St. Petersburgh, was that the vessel was outside of the three mile limit. But it was held on the other side that one of her canoes was within the three-mile limit, and upon this the whole question seemed to hang. If it could be established that the canoes as well as the vessel were outside the limit mentioned, Russia would have set up no claim, and would release the vessel. Now, then if Russia does not claim and exercise jurisdiction over the open sea outside of the three-mile limit, is not the United States going way beyond the rights obtained from Russia by purchase, in seizing vessels hundreds of miles from land.

In a former letter addressed to your paper on this subject, I took occasion to state that it would be against the traditional policy and best interests of the United States to have our claim conceded, giving us the right to close the Behring's Sea. If it should be conceded to us, other nations could play at the same game, and if each should set up a claim to some portion of the sea, the great "highway of nations" would soon become a thing of the past, and we would have no neutral waters.

All history, all tradition and poetry are based upon the theory that the "ocean is free," and no country more than America has greater interest in maintaining this idea.

But is it not well to look calmly at the situation and see where we are drifting. If some of our patriotic and enthusiastic Americans could just take a peep into Esquimalt harbor and see the war vessels lying there, I think he would soon come to the conclusion that a war with England over this question would be no holiday sport for us.

There are single vessels of the fleet that could cross over to Puget Sound in a few hours and lay every city under heavy tribute or destroy them at will. They could proceed to San Francisco and completely destroy it for all we could do to prevent. In making this statement I am not assuming high military knowledge, but refer to the highest authority in the land, such men as General Miles and others who have made similar statements and are constantly pressing their views on the government. No person has a greater pride or higher opinion of American valor or America's natural strength and ability to carry on a great war than myself. I know we are a great nation of over sixty millions of people, with almost unlimited resources, and could put an army of over two millions of fighting men in the field at a comparatively short notice. I know that in time we could probably overrun and take possession of all the British territory on the American continent, and destroy a vast amount of England's shipping. But to be plunged suddenly into a war with England on a trifling pretext we would be placed at a disadvantage. We would be like a mob of brave men with bare hands offering battle with a force of well armed men. We are simply not prepared as England is. We have no war vessels on the Pacific coast that would be a match for some of the vessels of the fleet now lying at Victoria. It is said by some (perhaps the statement is over drawn) that the Amphion could destroy our favorite vessel the Charleston in three minutes without firing a gun. But it is almost folly to even talk of the possibility of war between the two nations over the present question.

England does not want it, and her course all through has been marked with dignity and forbearance, in striking contrast with the course taken by our government.

If we are ever to have a war with England, and it is to be hoped it will never happen, let it be over some vital question involving our rights, such as would justify us in bringing the whole force of the nation into action. And whenever America's honor or interests are at stake, it is to be hoped there will be found no dissenting voice among her people, and that all will be ready to uphold and defend her against, not only England, but the whole world, if necessary.

AMERICAN NEWS.

General Strike Ordered.

PITTSBURG, Aug. 4.—About 300 men went out on strike at the Carbon Iron works today. The trouble dates from July 1st, at which time the puddlers, to the number of 96, refused to work, as the firm would not sign a scale prepared by the amalgamated association. This morning eight of the sixteen furnaces were started with colored men, and a general strike was ordered.

The New Enfield.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 4.—Secretary Proctor has received a present of the new Enfield rifle from the English government as a sample of the style of arms now in use in the British service. It is handsomely encased in a polished wooden box with silver plates and the corners lined with blue velvet. It is of the latest magazine pattern, and weighs about ten pounds.

G.A.R. Encampment.

NEW YORK, Aug. 4.—The U. S. steam cruiser Baltimore, flagship of the home squadron, arrived to-day from Bar Harbor, and is at anchor in the bay. She will carry the President to Boston, where he will attend an encampment of the grand army of the republic. The trip will be taken next Saturday. The Yorkton, now undergoing repairs at the navy yard, is expected to join the Baltimore, and should the Vesuvious, also being repaired at the navy yard, be ready in time, she, too, will join the cruise at Princeton or thereabouts. They will be joined by vessels of the home squadron as escorts.

A Double Tragedy.

MINDEN, Neb., Aug. 4.—Hans Hansen, an aged farmer, killed his wife this morning and then committed suicide. Hansen was preparing for a trip into the country, but just before he left the house he and his wife quarreled. He knocked her down with a club, killing her instantly. Hansen then dragged the body into an outbuilding and hanged it to a rafter. He then went to the barn and endeavored to hang himself, but the rope broke. Failing in this, he went to the house, took a shot-gun and blew his brains out.

Regarding Bills of Lading.

BOSTON, Mass., Aug. 4.—The Chamber of Commerce to-day appointed D. W. Ranlett, as delegate to the conference in Chicago to consider objections to the new uniform bill of lading, and adopted these resolutions: Resolved—That the Boston chamber of commerce believes and claims that a bill of lading properly made out and signed, is a proper, reasonable and safe negotiable security, and that no public carrier has a right to stamp it non-negotiable. Resolved—That no form of bill of lading will be acceptable to this body which does not recognize that it is incumbent upon the carrier to receipt for and deliver what it receives.

Sunk by Collision.

NEW YORK, Aug. 4.—It is now learned that two men, Bernard Lay and Andrew Anderson, were drowned in a collision, yesterday, in the lower bay by which the government dredger Advance was sunk by a steamship. Capt. Grove made a report of the collision to-day, in which he lays the blame on those who were in charge of the steamer Norje. He says four of the crew are missing, but believes that only the two men, Lay and Anderson, were drowned. The others escaped by climbing aboard the steamship.

Pugilistic.

NEW YORK, Aug. 4.—Theo. Peterson, president of the Olympic Club of New Orleans, telegraphed the Police Gazette today, that his club had decided to offer a $4,500 purse for a fight between Jack Dempsey and Bob Fitzzimmons.

Adrift in an Open Boat.

GLOUCESTER, Mass., Aug. 4. — The schooner A. E. Whyland arrived this evening from Flemish Cape with 240,000 pounds of codfish and 16,000 pounds of halibut. On June 28th, two of the crew, Martin Foley and Frank Bevel, were lost while visiting the trawls. The fog prevented a successful search for them. The schooner Minnesota on her way home also lost two men in a dorey, at the same time. The latter, after rowing about for five days and suffering terrible agony, came across a buoy which was fastened to a fisherman's trawl. They managed to haul up the gear and found a shark on the hook. He was ripped open and the raw flesh was taken to satisfy the raving hunger of the men. They were rescued soon afterward by the schooner Robt. J. Edwards.

ALL ABOUT THE FARM.

SOME OF THE LATEST IDEAS OF AGRICULTURAL WRITERS.

Good Farming is made Up of Many Operations—On the Proper Care of Lambs—Pekin Ducks—Notes for the Farmer.

Good farming is made up of several operations, all of which working together make a successful whole. Among some of these are draining, subsoiling, good plowing, pulverizing the soil, rotation of crops, thorough cultivation, providing shelter, care of manure, and control of fields by fencing. But these are not always performed in the best manner, and under adverse circumstances some of them do positive harm. Novices in farming, failing of success, denounce the operations and pronounce them "humbugs."

Take, for instance, the practice of subsoiling. In a gravelly or porous subsoil it is not needed, and the owner obtains no benefit from it. Performed in wet subsoil, which is adhesive or clayey in its composition, it may render it more compact by pressing it together like mortar, and may harden it instead of rendering it looser and lighter as intended. Or, the subsoiling may be incomplete and inefficient by the narrow furrow which it makes. The common plow which precedes it, cuts a furrow a foot wide, and the subsoil plow, as often constructed, hardly six inches; and the result is that the hard unbroken earth between them. A remedy for this defective work is to cut the common-plow furrows only half a foot wide, which break up all the hard ridges, and reduce the whole bed of mellow soil to a state of fine pulverization. Care should be taken to pulverize perfectly the portion of the earth which the subsoil-plow lifts and breaks up, and not merely to make it a line of clods, which would afford little or no aid to the plants with their long extending roots.

The defects in draining, as often practised, are insufficient depth of the ditches, defective underground channels for the escape of the water, and badly laid laid-out lines for a regular descent. The draining itself of the surplus water cannot do other wise than benefit the land by conveying away the water which the soil itself cannot hold, and leaving behind all that is required for vegetable growth. The only harm, therefore, in cutting drains where they are not wanted, is the useless waste of labor.

Plowing and harrowing may be worse than useless under adverse circumstances. A strong loam, plowed too wet, is converted to coarse clods as soon as it dries. Plowed too dry, the coarse clods are manufactured by the plow, instead of the soil being changed to a finely pulverized mass. The farmer, therefore, will need the exercise of his skill in avoiding these two extremes. We sometimes have seasons the weather of which consists largely of an abundance of rain at one time, and of extreme drought at another, and the owner of heavy soils will find a great advantage in thorough underdrainage, which will give him control of his fields in early spring weeks before he could begin the tillage of ground otherwise saturated with water.

Pekin Ducks.

This variety of ducks has only been known in Europe for about a dozen years. It is of Chinese origin, and very hardy, having in this respect done good service by giving a needed stamina to some of other varieties. It is probably the best layer of all ducks, and where eggs are chiefly sought for it can be recommended, as it will thrive almost everywhere, being a capital forager. With respect to size, it is most deceptive, for the abundance of feathers gives it the appearance of a large duck, whereas it is much smaller than the Aylesbury or the Rouen. The flesh also does not compare well in flavour these breeds being rather dry. In shape it differs from every other variety of duck, being totally devoid of keel, and the carriage almost upright, not unlike the penguin, for the legs are placed far back on the body. The head is short and thick, and the bill strong and stout. Considerable discussion has arisen as to the color of the Pekin, but it is usually accepted that it should be of a light canary yellow tinge, as if the under coat was yellow and the upper white. A pure white Pekin may be found, but the canary yellow is to be preferred. The bill is of deep orange, the eye black, the legs and feet a bright orange, and small in bone. For crossing they are very valuable, and as already stated, as layers they have really no equal.—Agriculture.

Proper Care of Lambs.

The present high price of sheep should lead all sheep owners to give them proper attention. The ewes should have plenty of good, coarse fodder, such as timothy, hay and clover, if it be not too dusty or mouldy. Even when so damaged, by shaking well before placing in the rack it will be made more palatable. Cornstalks and bright oats, or barley straw, may be fed as a noonday ration.

As the ewes become heavy they should be divided into flocks of about twenty-five each, and once a week fed a ration of vegetables—turnips, beets, or potatoes—not so much as a fattening food as a natural regulator of the system, and a welcome change from the hard, dry ration of hay and grain. Also see that all doors are large, so that sheep may pass through without injury by crowding.

At lambing time the pen should be made extra warm and comfortable, as lambs dropped during severe cold weather (especially if Merinos or fine wools) soon become chilled unless the room is warm or prompt attention is paid to them by the attendant. Should the ewe fail to own her lamb, it is best to tie her up in a separate stall; or, better still, partition off one corner of the pen so that she may not be shut away from the flock. If the lamb becomes chilled it may be fed a few tablespoonfuls of warm milk, mixed with one-tenth part of brandy or whiskey; or, in the absence of these, a few drops of Jamaica ginger or pain-killer may be administered with the milk. This treatment, with wrapping in a woollen blanket and placing near the stove, should soon restore the lamb to vigour. If it is placed in the pen with others, it is a good plan to place upon the nose of the mother a few drops of the same material that was mixed with the lamb's drink. This hint will often cause the ewe to own her lamb, or even a strange lamb, when otherwise trouble would be experienced.

The first six hours of a lamb's life is the most critical time; hence many farmers will go to the barn at midnight to look after their flock, and it often pays to do so, as a well-kept lamb is worth in October not less than $2.50, and often $4 is obtained for them. When a week old lambs will begin to eat the leaves and clover heads, and also the fine leaves of timothy, cornstalks and etc. But clover is their favorite, and should be given them if possible. It not only aids growth but makes them strong and hearty.

No doubt some of the ewes will become thin in flesh. These, with their lambs, should have a separate enclosure, and be fed an extra ration of grain, making the feed trough low so [illegible] may also eat a portion [illegible] [illegible].—[illegible]

A BRAVE GIRL'S MISFORTUNE.

One of the Blizzard Heroines in Great Danger of Total Blindness.

There is a young girl lying in one of the wards in Wesley Hospital—a slight, white girl with yellow hair. She is only 21, but her eyes are failing and the physicians say that the end will be blindness. Of course there is a chance. There always is. The simple fact that a young girl is losing her eyesight is not of much importance; the world is too busy to pay much attention to commonplace things of this sort. There is one element in this story that lifts it above the commonplace. That young girl is of the same tough, true fibre that old heroes and heroines were made of.

People out in the far West remember Jan. 12, 1888. That was the day of the great blizzard. It crept over the plains, gathering strength, until it swept through Nebraska—a whirling avalanche of wind and ice and darkness. Sixteen children gathered that morning at a little school out on the Nebraska prairie. The teacher was Sarah Hill, a young Western girl of 19. A year before, with true Western grit, she determined to make her own way in the world, and this little district schoolhouse on the prairie was the first milestone on her way. About noon the wind rose and the air grew suddenly dark. In less than ten minutes the blizzard is sweeping over the little schoolhouse. The snow piles up sullenly, and it is icy cold. The fire is dying out; the coal box is nearly empty. Clearly something must be done. It is impossible to stay in that ramshackle building, without fire or fuel; it seems almost impossible to face the blizzard in the attempt to reach a securer shelter. Not for a moment does the young teacher think of the ease with which she might save herself. She calls the youngsters about her and divides their wraps among them. Then they set out.

Miss Hill held the smallest girl, a tot of 6, by the hand. The other children joined hands and formed an Indian file, all clinging together; in this manner the little band started out to fight a way through the wind and snow.

"The thin snow," says Miss Hill, "sifting into the eyes and ears and nose, blinded and chocked us. The wind tore our wraps open, and our clothing was no protection against the cold and the snow. The snow froze on our faces as fast as it fell; it glued our eyelids down. The only way I could tell if all the little ones were there was to turn my back to the wind and pry my eyes open."

So they went on, the brave girl leading the way, the tired, frightened children stumbling after her with their heads down. Miss Hill picks her way as best she can. The snow grows deeper; piles up along the road in drifts through which they have to beat their way.

"My only fear was that one of the children should be lost," said Miss Hill. "They were all brave little things—prairie born—but it was hard to drag them along and give them courage."

"And did you not lose heart?"

"No," said the girl, simply. "I prayed."

For one hour they fought the blizzard. Once they strayed from the road and wandered for a long time before they found it again. It is odd they ever found it. Men died that day within a few yards of their own doors, lost in the darkness and snow. But these helpless youngsters had a brave guide. She found the road again. It was time. The wee child she held by the hand fell and could not be roused. Miss Hill took the little one in her arms and staggered on. The child next in line clung to her skirts. A dark blotch against the sky; one flash of red in it. The half-blinded girl thanked God, for house and hearth were reached. She had saved sixteen little Nebraskans.

"What were your thoughts during the journey?" she was asked.

"I thought of the children." And then she added after a moment: "Once, when I felt I could not keep up, I thought of their mothers. Yes, there was one other thought. I knew it was my duty. I could not betray the confidence the people had put in me. I knew God would bring us through it all safely."

Miss Sarah Hill is a patient in the Wesley Hospital. Her eyes gave way under the strain of that blizzard day. A number of operations have been performed on them; many more must be undergone. The result is in doubt. It may be that after weeks of suffering the end will be blindness.—Chicago Tribune.

STRANGER THAN FICTION.

Fiction is Downright Gospel Compared with the Average Snake Story.

Seventeen years ago I lived with my father and mother on the banks of the Stranger River in Atchison county, Kansas. I was only 7 years of age, and one day my youthful fancy was caught by the pretty colors of a blacksnake. I pulled a small ring off my finger and a string out of my pocket. Placing the ring over the head of the snake, I started home in triumph, dragging the snake at my heels, and feeling as much a conqueror as the Roman Emperor who dragged the captives behind his chariots. In climbing over a fence my captive made its escape. Ring, string, everything disappeared.

I shed a few tears at the time, but had forgotten the matter until this week, when I returned to the vicinity of my old home in Atchison county for the purpose of buying some sheep. While crossing a small creek that flows into the Stranger River my attention was called by the barking of my dog to a strange something in a tree. I investigated and found there an immense blacksnake, fully ten feet long. Between the dog and myself, we succeeded in killing the snake, though I was obliged to use in the warfare both a club and a revolver. The dog finished the snake by giving it a shaking and tearing it in pieces.

You will hardly believe me, I know, but you can have my head if it wasn't the same identical snake that got away from me seventeen years ago. How do I know? Simple enough. That little blacksnake had grown to be a monstrous big one, the little silver ring around its neck had grown until it was as large as a lady's bracelet, and the piece of twine had grown until it had become a good-sized rope. But the strangest part of all was that the dog had shaken out seventeen little blacksnakes, and that each one was the exact counterpart of the snake that made its escape from me in the long ago, while around the necks of each of the seventeen young ones were silver rings, and attached to these rings were short pieces of twine. And upon each one of these silver rings you could plainly distinguish the initials of my name just as they had been stamped in the silver ring that I wore when 7 years old—Kansas City Times.

Living Up to Side Whiskers.

It is a fact that side-whiskered men are seldom seen in young and busy communities. There is a good reason for it. Side whiskers are expensive. They make a man look dignified, and lead him to cultivate slow ways and a careful style of costume. In order to keep up first-class side whiskers a man must have leisure and money. If he gets up early and rushes around town in a bob-tailed coat he will look out of place, and people will stare at him with pained curiosity. Atlanta as yet has very few side-whiskered men. They will come in time. When we have more wealth and leisure there will be a lot of solid old fellows here sunning their mutton chops on the promenade. But we must wait awhile.—Atlanta Constitution.

CHLORODYNE.

THE ORIGINAL and ONLY GENUINE. Advice to Invalids—If you wish to obtain relief from pain and anguish, to calm and quiet, refreshing sleep, free from headache, assuage the weary achings of protracted disease, invigorate the nervous media, and regulate the circulating system of the body, you will provide yourself with that marvellous remedy discovered by Dr. J. Collis Browne (late Army Medical Staff), to which he gave the name of CHLORODYNE, and which is admitted by the profession to be the most wonderful and valuable remedy ever discovered.

CHLORODYNE acts like a charm in Diarrhoea, and is the only specific in Cholera and Dysentery.

CHLORODYNE effectually cuts short all attacks of Epilepsy, Hysteria, Palpitation, and Spasms.

, Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians that he had received a despatch from Her Majesty's Consul at Manilla, to the effect that Cholera had been raging fearfully, and that the ONLY remedy of any service was CHLORODYNE — See "Lancet," December 31, 1864.

CAUTION. -- Vice - Chancellor Sir W. Page Wood stated that Dr. J. Collis Browne was, undoubtedly, the inventor of Chlorodyne; that the story of the defendant Freeman was deliberately untrue, which, he regretted to say, had been sworn to.—See "The Times," July 13, 1864.

Sold in bottles at 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., and 11s. each. None is genuine without the words "Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne" on the Government stamp. Overwhelming medical testimony accompanies each bottle. Caution—Beware of Piracy and Imitations.

SPORTS AND PASTIMES.

HERE AND THERE.

Foster intends reopening his athletic academy at the old stand about the first of September. He will have it entirely refitted with the best appliances for athletic training. He seems determined on business this time.

CRICKET.

Considerable interest centers in the cricket match Saturday between an eleven from the navy and the Victoria club, and an eleven from the mainland. The Beresfords are trying to arrange a match with an eleven of the Victoria club, picked from those staying at home. Thus the Victorians will be fighting at home and abroad.

Saturday week has been set apart for a match between the Beresfords and an eleven from the Nanaimo cricket club. Evidently the Beresfords donned their war paint when they first started out this season, and they don't intend to bury the hatchet till they have conquered all rivals.

WRESTLING.

The Post-Intelligencer says. No response has been received from the telegram sent to E. T. Zeigler, manager for Matsada Sorakichi, informing him that Joe Acton was in Seattle ready to meet him. The failure of the Jap and the manager to keep their appointment with Acton is looked upon in a peculiar light in sporting circles. It is openly asserted that the Jap, in his present condition, is afraid of Acton, and that his manager will not back him against him. Since the failure of the Jap to keep his appointment with Acton, an endeavor is being made to arrange a match for him in order to give the public a chance to see him at hard, earnest wrestling. There is talk of a match with Don. Cameron. The latter has the proper backing, and it may be that a match can be made.

A Child Saved.

MY little boy was taken very bad with diarrhœa, he was very delicate and got so low we had no hope of his life, but a lady friend recommended Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry, and although he could only bear a few drops at a time he got well. It saved my child.

Codfish For the Million.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 5.—The Schooner Vanderbilt, hence April 13th for Behring's Sea, returned to port yesterday with 48,500 codfish. This makes her fifth cargo of the kind this season.

A Chapter of Accidents.

NEEDLES, Cala., Aug. 5.—A cloud burst in the mountains in the eastern part of Mojave county at an early hour last night, washed out a bridge two miles west of Yucca. The eastbound freight due at Yucca at 8 o'clock was precipitated into the river, killing Fireman Wm. Neil, slightly wounding Engineer Hurshér, and seriously scalding Brakeman Sutton. The San Francisco express due at Needles last night at six o'clock was delayed by washouts near Williams, Ariz., and only reached Yucca a few minutes after the freight accident, having a narrow escape. After the bridge was fixed up a train came on closely followed by the Los Angeles express, which had overtaken the first one. When near Needles, at 12:30, and running fast, the Pullman car on the San Francisco train left the rails throwing the tourist car just ahead over on its side. Wm. Henault of San Antonio, Tex., received severe bruises but the other passengers escaped with nothing more serious than a rough shaking up.

On Trial for Murder.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 5.—On the night of the 31st of last March, Michael Chebucker entered a saloon and became involved in a row with the proprietor, Philip Martin. During the scuffle Chebucker fatally stabbed Martin. The trial for murder commenced to-day.
